Dear Mr Gardner

After meeting with you today, May 20 1991 at 9.30 am at the above address and after ascertaining from you that it is possible to protect certain ideas before manufacture and or assembly of the necessary equipment to produce a final saleable item,

I would now like to set out below for you what my idea is for a new Method of Advanced Teaching Aid and at the same time engage your services to advise me and set in place protection of this idea, if protection can be gained at the soonest possible moment.

1. A video cassette of a clients swing or technique is taken using a video camera
2. The client then selects the teacher he or she wants their technique matched to.
3. This video taped signal is then placed in either a specially made video transmitting machine to be sent through the telephone line or by satellite to a central computer station.
4. At the central computer station the computer computers have been pre-programmed in various languages with the teachings and swings of our selected tour players, artists, performers teachers or perfect swings machines and on receipt of the clients video signals into the computer it is then analysed by the computer against the selected teachers technique and any errors pinpointed in the computer together with the editing of such clients on a new section of video file along with the teachers dialogue and display of the correct method to be used to improve his or her technique.
5. Once this new section of film has been produced either manually or by computer it is then dispatched back to the clients representative by telephone line or satellite communication to be added to the clients tape for sale.

At all times during our discussion and before protection is gained I would ask that this letter be kept to the normal Attorney Client relationship.

Yours Faithfully
Rick Baker
